

MCCOY LIMITED & UNGEMACH

By Chiquita Prestwood

When sales for McCoy Limited Pottery and Ungemach Pottery (who made a few items for McCoy Limited) were slowing, they decided to get together with the idea of maybe helping each other out.

Per the agreement developed, Ungemach was to produce certain items for McCoy Limited. All rights to produce the product in its design or design related, belonged to McCoys. Any use of the product without written permission was prohibited. On written request, all dies/molds, etc. we're to be returned to McCoys at the McCoy's expense.

McCoy Limited, in the spirit of cooperation, agreed to work with them from time to time to develop new lines to be jointly marketed with profits split.

This joint venture, due to the relationship with management of Ungemach, did not allow any company or employed individual to sell these products directly to certain companies.

However, McCoy Limited will/would represent products of Ungemach both developed jointly or by Ungemach to certain customers on a commission basis. Ungemach was not to supply, correspond about or promote these items without express permission from McCoy Limited.

McCoy Limited did include items strictly made by and (previously) for Ungemach. A couple of these items were Included in the promotional piece included in the latest McCoy Pottery Society January 2021 Journal Issue. The #545 Klemm Ghost and 508 Ghost are two examples.
